JESSE SPIGHT

Among the most famous of Plymouth's citizens was Jessie Spight, who was buried there, later his body and monument were moved to the Odd Fellow's Cemetery at Aberdeen, Miss., the inscription gives his life:

East Side:

"Sacred to the memory of General Jessie Spight, who was born in Green Co., N.C., on the 22nd day of September, 1798, and died at his residence in this beautiful grove on the first day of May 1847 in the 49th year of his age. This block of marble with its inscription but feebly portrays the poignant grief felt by those who knew the deceased."

North Side:

"Be it known beneath this simple monument rests the mortal remains of as pure a Patriot, as firm a Republican, and as honest a man as the sun ever shone upon. In the various relations of husband, father, master and friends, his superior was not to be found. At an early age he was a Representative and soon after a Senator in the councils of his native state and successively the Presiding Officer in each body. In 1829 he was elected a representative in Congress in which capacity he served eight years."

West Side :

"In 1835 he was honored with a seat in the Convention to revise the state constitution where he was alike distinguished. In 1839 he was elected a Representative in the Mississippi legislature and chosen its speaker. In 1844 he was elected State Senator over which he was called to preside. And in 1844 he was elected Senator in Congress where he faithfully represented his adopted State up to the day of his death."

South Side:

"Truly the cup of his earthly honors was full. His remains were here deposited with Masonic Honors and we are buoyed up with fond hope that his immortal spirit is reaping unfading honors around the throne of God."
